OVERVIEW

This has been a year of extending our activities both within the country and internationally. Significant progress has been made in implementing activities related to programmes of Women's Empowerment and Occupational Health and Safety. Our programmes on Capacity Building and Natural Resources have undergone a period of internal review with a view to determine more appropriate focus in the coming period.

The year has also witnessed PRIA being pulled into a variety of directions as a consequence of developments within the country. The growing violence associated with the post-Ayodhya period forced many voluntary organisations to address the issues of secularism and respect for diversity. PRIA also got involved in supporting these initiatives, in particular through the Peoples’ Campaign on Secularism.

The revitalisation and reformulation of the programmes of ASPBRA entailed a significant involvement in various national and regional consultations and planning its events.

The year also witnessed increased demands on and requests from PRIA to provide educational support to a wide variety of activities and groups within the country. A strategy to jointly respond to these initiatives in collaboration with regional support institutions is to be called for the future.

May 1993

Dr. Rajesh Tandon
Coordinator.

SECTORAL ACTIVITIES

Support to VANI in developing its programmes and capacities was provided on an ongoing basis. In particular, support was provided to a national workshop on "Role of Voluntary Action and New Economic Policies" held in Trivandrum in April, 1992. As a follow-up of VANI's programme, a two-day national workshop on developing indicators on monitoring the impact of new economic policies of rural and urban poor was conducted in PRIA during January 15-16, 1993.

At the initiative of VANI, a People's Campaign for Secularism was launched in November, 1992. PRIA participated in the Campaign Convention held in Lucknow during February 27-28, 1993 and assisted the production of learning materials on this theme.

Similar initiatives undertaken by other regional and national networks were also assisted.
INTERNATIONAL ACTIVITIES

Following the first General Assembly of ASPBAE, development of programmes of new activities were undertaken in subregional Planning Meetings. These sub-regional meetings were facilitated. Participation in these events has contributed to the furthering of the objectives of ASPBAE.

In collaboration with IDR, Boston, the programme on Asian Regional Support Organisations was continued during this period. In particular, planning meetings were held in Sri Lanka in July and December 1992. A Needs Assessment seminar organised by Nepali NGOs in September 1992 was facilitated.

Additional interventions to strengthen other national and international networks of NGOs were supported like the emergence of CIVICUS and strengthening of ICAE.
